Description & house plan

[B]In September and October, free wine tasting for all guests.[/B] This house is situated among the green hills of the eastern shore of the Istrian peninsula. It is nestled in a quiet area, just 7 km from the seaside. In addition to the peace and quiet here you will also find a playground for children which includes swings and a teeter totter, and an area where you can play football, volleyball or badminton. You also have access to two mountain bikes which you can use to explore the surroundings with their hills, history, nature and sea. The landlord(s) is a producer of wine and brandy, and each guest will receive local wine, brandy, honey and cakes for a true Istrian experience. Welcome to the healthy rural life! For even greater enjoyment there is a covered grill just waiting for your arrival.

Surroundings & activities

The picturesque town of Labin is situated by the sea, overlooking a 320-meter-high hill. Its ancient name was Albona (or Alvona) which in the Celtic language means "a town on a hill". After the Illyrians the town came under Roman rule, followed by Byzantium, the Franks, the Venetians, Napoleon, the Hapsburgs, and finally the Italians. Each has left its indelible mark upon Laban's identity. The town still retains the spirit of its noble past, while its beauty continues to draw large numbers of tourists each year. Its uptown is an excellent example of a city acropolis, consisting of medieval walls, narrow streets and countless precipitous steps which lead upward to finally reveal a spectacular view. Today the ancient part of town hosts a variety of artisans whose studios and galleries are scattered among the narrow streets. You will have to pass “Torion“, a medieval tower, to gain access to the old town. Just below the tower you will find the picturesque city square with loggia, which offers shows and entertainment during the summer. The cannon atop the tower dates back to the times of Austrian occupation. Labin also makes an ideal starting point for daily tours along the fascinating and untouched coasts of eastern and central Istria, with their medieval castles and fortresses, where time seems to stand still. Rabac is a large resort town on Kvaerner Bay, just 6 km southeast of Labin. Formerly a small fishing port of just three dozen homes, Rabac has grown in recent years to become a resort town with numerous villas and apartment buildings. Here you will find many possibilities for spending your time: sailing, a casino, fishing, boat trips, a museum, water sports, deep sea fishing, forests, horseback riding, hunting, and much, much more.
